panaccusticum - new minimal music by Matthias Etter

Sounds, themes and fragmented melodies repeated in short intervals, scattered and stacked up across a wide stereo field. In this (live) violin-performance, composition and improvisation create a spatial canonesque-sound, and provide an invitation to relax. Listening to this music with eyes closed may alter your perception of time.

After years of experimentation and improvisation on his violin, Matthias Etter has created a unique soundscape using stereo-effects. This Year he will bring his panaccusticum project to New York for the second time, where he has been invited to play to club venues.
